CONCEPT NOTE

Background

The UfM Water Agenda

The UfM Ministerial Declaration on Water (Malta, 27 April 2017), called for “a Union for the Mediterranean Water Agenda to enhance regional cooperation towards sustainable and integrated water management in the UfM region” and mandated the UfM Water Expert Group (WEG), under the guidance of the UfM Senior Officials’ Meeting (SOM), and in consultation with regional institutions, donors and non-governmental actors of the UfM region, to “elaborate and implement the UfM Water Agenda”.

The UfM Senior Officials’ Meeting endorsed the UfM Water Agenda on 17 December 2018. The UfM Water Agenda includes:

- The UfM Water Policy Framework for Actions 2030. A strategic framework to guide the work of the WEG up to 2030, in line with the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) horizon. It is structured around four thematic priorities: (1) water-energy-food-ecosystem nexus; (2) water, employment and migration, (3) water, sanitation and hygiene; and (4) water and climate change. For each thematic area, the document details aims and objectives; aimed outputs and main types of interventions; aimed outcomes; and partnerships. Its 2020 update includes the UfM WEG Work Plan 2020-2022 and highlights an number of UfM projects and initiatives, as well as actions implemented by UfM member states.

Objectives

The overall objective of the Conference is to support progress towards achieving water security in the Mediterranean by providing a high-visibility platform for policymakers and stakeholders to discuss how to further improve climate resilient water finance and investment policies in Mediterranean countries, with due attention to addressing gender inequalities, engaging youth and promoting job creation.

The specific objectives of the Conference are:

1. To raise the profile of water investment and finance issues on the regional political agenda and within the finance community, including towards enhanced gender-transformative planning, decision making and institutional development for mobilising climate adaptation investments.
2. To promote peer learning among UfM member states on the role of climate finance in the water sector and how to attract climate finance.
3. To identify ways to enhance the engagement of public and private financiers in the water and climate agenda.
4. To discuss how water investment policies are evolving to address the impacts of climate change on different segments of the society, including women and girls, the economy, and the environment.
5. To promote peer learning among UfM member states on the development and implementation of large water investment plans in the context of climate change, with a focus on wastewater reuse.
6. To present to a regional audience the current Team Europe Initiatives on Water and discuss how they can support the financial sustainability of the water sector.
7. To continue developing a regional roadmap for improving water investment policies by sharing experiences on how the recommendations from the 2021 Water Investment Policy Forum are being implemented.
8. To seek Ministerial guidance for the development of a high-level action agenda for improving climate resilient water finance and investment policies, including with a poverty alleviation and gender transformative vision, that could be submitted to COP-27.
